JOSEPH P. GAVENONIS

Joseph P. Gavenonis, commander of the American Legion Department of Pennsylvania, will be honored guest at the district American Legion convention to be held in Warren this Saturday.

The 39-year-old Mildred, Pa., official will make the principal convention address before a public audience at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at War Memorial Field.

RESCUE WORKERS of Civil Defense went into action at Thursday's special drills. They are captured by the camera here attempting to remove several bodies trapped in a collapsed building.

BUSINESS AS USUAL on Warren streets during the test alert last Friday. Traffic continued and pedestrians failed to seek cover. Most of those in the range of the camera acted a bit guilty, which at least indicates they were aware of what was going on.

Civilian defense units are preparing trained personnel for emergencies and in this area that probably will be the extent of their duties. We are not apt to be bombed, and even in cities where bombing is expected there will not be time either to evacuate the people or to get them all under cover. In fact we lack the cover.

But in areas such as ours we must be ready to care for the injured and to serve as the home front after the cities are obliterated. We also must learn to guard against fall-out.

CHIEF CORNPLANTER'S GRAVE MONUMENT marks the entrance to the jamboree troop's campsite. The replica of the Indian's grave stone rises 40 feet into the air and can be seen from a distance on all sides of the campsite. It was fabricated in Warren under the supervision of Jim Nordine.

CEMENT AND PLASTER are keeping workmen hustling on the Penn Laurel Motel which soon should be serving Warren guests. The motel has forty-two large rooms, each equipped with air conditioning, television, and telephone service.

Here we peek through the archway which leads to the inside court. Rooms may be entered off this court.

ANNUAL LIBRARY REPORT

Those who want to plug for a county library service certainly can find a slant to support them in the annual report of the Warren Public Library. In the past year the library has gained in the number of borrowers, with 1122 new ones. However, 400 inactive borrowers were dropped.

Of these 400 inactive borrowers are many young people who came to Warren for schooling but apparently lacked the time while catching busses on the run to visit the library. And they probably came from areas where there either were no libraries or where the book supply was so limited that they never developed the reading habit.

It is an educational tragedy that these young people in the rural areas are not enjoying the same benefits along reading lines as are those in urban sections. With reading easily available in the larger communities there is no reason why the rural boys and girls should not be enjoying the same advantages.

The state is willing to help with funds and books and a very small amount is needed from the county funds to equip a library and operate a bookmobile that would supplement existing libraries in small communities and provide book stations at schools and other points where there are none.

Friends of the Library is a typical group which can help such institutions once they are organized. In Warren last year the library was given $1,250.51 by the Friends of the Library group. This money was used to redecorate and refurnish the staff room. Some of the money was used to help build additional stacks in the children's room. A county library soon would find such a group functioning to help it buy books and provide other services.

Increased costs even show up in the book field. One of the most lucrative sources of income for the Warren library is the memorial book fund. Last year this brought in $2,273.72 for new books, which was about $140 more than the previous year. But it bought 28 books less than the year before, due to increased prices. The yield was 565 new books.

The library reference service grew last year, with Beaty students learning to utilize the shelves as well as adults and industry. Librarian Georgia Coyle proposes that teachers work more closely with the library so that the wants of various classes can be anticipated. If the library is notified in advance, books needed for the subject being studied can be collected on a shelf to ease the job for all concerned.

The value of a capable children's librarian was revealed this year. Miss Ann Lesser since she has joined the staff has done much to liven up the children's department and the result has been an increase of circulation by 2400 volumes.

The turn-over of staff members again reveals the low salary scale. As Mrs. Coyle says, it is difficult to procure and keep people on a salary of $1800 a year. The Warren Area Joint School board increased its help to the library this year. It now contributes $10,800. Warren borough puts up $9,000. Endowments and friends provide the rest of the $42,956.

The librarian points out that in the past year the budget has increased only $3,504, while insurance has doubled, utilities have increased a third, salaries have moved up $1700 for all employes, and more money is spent for books with less books resulting.

As usual money is needed. And as usual, the annual meeting revealed that the board has absolutely no plans concerning how to obtain some. A task that would not be unsurmountable. In fact, we believe it would be exceedingly easy .... if ever tried.

The Warren library enjoyed several innovations this year. A Library Aide program was initiated with five senior Girl Scouts from Starbrick taking twenty hours of training and serving fifty hours.

A fines for forgiveness day was held, which brought back 258 books. And a music listening room was put into service, with increasingly popular results.

KINZUA DAM AND THE SENECA INDIANS

About every aspect of the Kinzua dam has been covered in this paper and other mediums in which the editor has written down through the years. One of our first pieces on the subject, dating back about twenty years, was the difficulty which might develop when it came time to take over or use parts of the Indian lands, and in fact cover the Cornplanter area.

The Corps of Army Engineers, in Pittsburgh, whose job it is to prepare plans for water control and to provide information on such plans, has written several releases as a help to editors and the public. Some of these we have quoted or used. This week we would like you to read what the engineers say about the Indian problem and the treaty rights.

After stating that the Allegheny river reservoir was authorized by the Flood Control Acts of 1936, 1938, and 1941, Col. H. E. Sprague in a talk at Salamanca stated,

"The 1936 Flood Control Act contained a declaration of the policy of Congress that destructive floods causing loss of life and property and obstruction of commerce, constitute a menace to national welfare and that improvements of waterways for flood control purposes are in the interest of the general welfare.

"When the question of the treaty rights of the Seneca Nation is examined in the light of the Constitution and judicial and legislative precedent, it is evident that the national policy which I have just stated can be satisfied consistent with good faith to the Senecas.

"Congress in the exercise of its constitutional powers to regulate commerce has the authority to regulate navigation and to provide flood protection and watershed development. If the United States has determined its need for certain land for a public use that is within the sovereign powers, it must have the right to appropriate that land, for otherwise an owner who refused to sell at all or only at an unreasonable price could subordinate the Constitutional powers of Congress to his own will.

"Accordingly, the courts have held that lands, whether owned by private parties, states, municipalities, or Indians, can be appropriated by the Federal Government for public use with its delegated powers. In the appropriation of lands the United States is liable under the Fifth Amendment to make just compensation.

"Since the United States cannot be sued without its consent, the "moral" obligation of Congress is to assure that the courts are open for recovery of just compensation if agreement cannot be reached.

"Congress no longer makes treaties with Indians (Act of March 3, 1871). Co-existence of separate sovereignties within the same geographical boundaries is considered basically untenable. Congress has long regulated Indian affairs by exercise of its legislative power.

"The effect of the 1794 Treaty with the Seneca Nation is the recognition by the United States that the Nation has a vested property right. But this property right, like property rights held by any other party, is subject to the inherent right of the Government to appropriate property for public use in the exercise of the powers granted Congress by the Constitution.

"The integration of Indians into our civilization has been and is the policy of Congress. The Citizenship Act of 2 June 1924 declared all non-citizen Indians born within the territorial limits of the United States to be citizens. Prior to the act about two-thirds of the Indians of the United States had already acquired citizenship. The Indians of New York are among the most advanced in the country as evidenced by recent legislation and legislative history pertaining thereto.

"The legislation to which I refer is Public Law 785, approved 13 September 1950, which conferred jurisdiction on the courts of the State of New York with respect to Civil actions between Indians or to which Indians are parties, and Public Law 690, approved 14 August 1950, which authorized the Seneca Nation to lease lands within the Cattaraugus, Allegany and Oil Springs Reservations (outside the limits of certain villages, where the Seneca Nation already had leasing power) and to collect and disburse moneys realized from leases.

"The legislative History for Public Law 785 (U. S. Code Congressional Service, 81st Congress, Second Session, 1950, Vol. 2, pages 3731, 3732) states: 'The Indians of New York have been classified by the Indian Bureau as among the most advanced in the Nation, and the Bureau has stated that they are in no further need of governmental supervision or control. . . . The enactment of this legislation into law would certainly be in line with the established policy of the Public Lands Committee in its dealings with the Indians; i. e., this committee is especially interested in passing legislation which will lead to the gradual assimilation of the Indian population into the American way of life, and the gradual but final complete removal of governmental supervision and control.'

"And the Legislative History for Public Law 690 (U. S. Code Congressional Service, 81st Congress, Second Session, 1950, Vol. 2, pages 2978, 2982) states: 'It is the judgment of your committee that these Indians (i.e. members of the Seneca Nation) are competent to manage their own affairs and to assume the responsibilities which will be placed upon them by the provisions of this bill, as proposed to be amended. The enactment of this bill will make it possible for the United States to withdraw from certain operations which it is now carrying on in respect to these New York Indians, and will enable the Bureau of Indian Affairs to close its Salamanca Agency.'

"It is proposed to acquire a flowage easement on the Allegany Reservation. The reservoir would have a summer storage pool of 3,667 acres in this reservation. The other required 5,347 acres of this reservation would be used only occasionally for temporary impoundment of floods. The Allegany Reservation contains 30,469 acres. Only about 12 per cent of this will be subject to protracted flooding.

"The Indians would receive just compensation for such acquisition as would be made by the United States, and reasonable costs of resettlement of persons and effects. The Allegany Reservation would continue to remain in possession of the Seneca Nation. The taking for the reservoir would thus be in the nature of a flowage easement only. Except for habitation, the Indians would still have the use of the area involved by the reservoir, for fishing, hunting, and some types of agriculture.

"In this respect, the Seneca Nation has already granted rights in their lands, to Salamanca, New York, as a site for the city; to the Pennsylvania and Erie Railroad Companies for rail lines; to public agencies for highways and roads; to public utilities for electric and telephone lines; to industries for pipe lines; to private interests for farms and buildings, and to oil and gas interests for leaseholds.

"The Pittsburgh District, Corps of Engineers has constructed ten flood control reservoirs. Four thousand five hundred (4,500) people have been displaced by these flood control facilities; all received just compensation.

"The Corps of Engineers in doing its job has had several contacts with the Seneca Nation. It is our sincere desire to continue negotiations with the Nation on an amicable basis to the end that a fair and equitable settlement of all problems may be attained."

ACTUATED LIGHTS GROWING

A few years back we bemoaned the time we wasted annually waiting at traffic lights. This was based on our study of a single light in Warren through which we traveled, and still travel, at least twice a day, and usually more than that.

At the rate of twice a day it is bound to hold us up one minute because it is not synchronized with the light a block away. A minute a day is 365 minutes a year, and that adds up to over six hours. Six hours wasted waiting at one light!

And we are but one motorist. Multiply it by the number of motorists and multiply that by many more lights. It becomes an item in our short lives.

The popularity of the actuated light has grown in large bounds since we pleaded for its invention and acceptance. The state now is approving over one hundred a year, and this year the number probably will exceed the fixed-time signals, such as most towns in this area have.

The state has studied the problem and estimates it costs a motorist 1.3 cents every time he stops at a light. It determined that the single light which it tested was costing motorists over $20,000 a year for unnecessary stops!

In fact, the number of unnecessary stops made at this one light totaled 212 for a single hour! Imagine what that does to traffic flow . . . and the motoring budget.

An actuated light allows cars from a side street to drive onto the main stem whenever they appear. In short, the green light is on continually for the main street, and turns red only when a car approaches from the side street.

We have many such situations in Warren and could have more. The lights on Fourth could be left on green most of the time until cars approached from Hickory or Liberty. There are many such possibilities for Pennsylvania ave.

To justify a light, and to assure its approval by the state, there must be 750 cars an hour through an intersection. However, in the case of an actuated light, the side street need have only 75 cars and pedestrians an hour.

Exceptions are part time lights at intersections where an industrial plant or a school needs entrance onto or across a main street at stated times.

ELECTRIC HEATING

When we note the increased use of electricity that is evident in annual electric company reports and for obvious reasons which can be found in every home and plant, we wonder where the juice will come from when electric heating becomes practical.

We are told that it already is available if you want it, but we question how economical it would be. Baseboard heating systems now can be purchased that use electric power. The day is not far away when you may have no more than electricity coming into your home for utility use, and it may be that you will be so dependent on it that you will need an auxiliary system built in for emergencies.

Penelec last year served 387,505 customers in thirty-one counties. Nearly 40,000 of these were new. They used over three billion kilowatt hours! An increase of nine per cent. In December when electricity obviously is in great demand, there was one hour when 704,000 kilowatt hours were generated to meet the demand.

Electricity for residential customers dropped one-tenth of a cent per kilowatt hour in 1956, from 3.2 to 3.1 cents, while the average residential use increased 208 kilowatt hours. The average was 2,729. (Check your bills.)

All of these are big figures, but despite additional generating facilities at Seward and Shawville, which will increase their capacity over 400,000 KWH, what would house-heating demands do to this situation? Could we handle it?

COLOR FILM PROCESSING

Those who miss the old method of sending color film directly to the Eastman plant for processing as a part of the deal when a roll is purchased may soon find a partial restoration of that service. It was discontinued when the federal laws were applied against monopoly.

However, Eastman may introduce a method whereby you obtain a gummed label from the dealer which enables you to mail directly to Eastman. You will pick up the finished product at the dealer's, and pay for it there, but you will not need to take the film there for processing. Eastman will get more business and you will be saved half the trouble you now "suffer".

EASY CLEANING

If you have difficulty cleaning your electric coffee maker because you can't dunk it in a dishpan, try this one. Brew the cleaning solution in the maker. A quart of water and a tablespoon of baking soda or cream of tartar will remove rancid coffee flavor and odor.

X-RAY SHOE-FITTING

If you know of any store which uses a fluoroscope, or x-ray machine, to fit shoes to your feet, the State Health Department wants to hear about it. Since they were outlawed in Pennsylvania, most of the 800 machines in use have been put out of service.

The radiation dosage from the machines varied, but was sufficient to cause Pennsylvania and several other states, including New York, to stop their use by stores. They still can be used by licensed physicians.

Dulles Attempts To Stifle Press Freedom

By Doris Fleeson

WASHINGTON. -- The Eisenhower Administration negotiates its military contracts, shows dissenters the exit and seeks by its power of appointment to mould the policies of the independent agencies. The press is next.

Freedom of the press has always been considered non-negotiable and indivisible by working reporters, as countless policemen, politicians and assorted public figures can testify. Secretary of State Dulles, however, will seek to negotiate and divide it late this week with what the State Department impressively calls "news media representatives."

The group will discuss the right of American reporters to enter Red China. For many months, the Secretary has been fighting against it with excuses of more or less doubtful validity, some of them highly uncomplimentary to the trade.

He still seeks to limit sharply the freedom of the press, first by insisting that in peacetime he has the right to control its travels, and second, by putting his oar into the selection of the reporters to be given what he defines as the privilege of entering Red China.

Earlier he had asked employers in the various news businesses to agree among themselves on a kind of blue ribbon list of "sound men," whose qualifications for going where Dulles did not want them to go in the first place would be passed upon by Dulles. This was rejected.

His latest idea is that representatives of the 12 U. S. news organizations who had men in China prior to its seizure by the Communists should receive the accolade. The State Department says the news organizations favor this, and maybe they do, since it means they will be represented.

The Secretary of State is operating in this area without Constitutional sanction -- in fact, the Constitution forbids his interference.

He has not suggested to Congress that it might profitably debate a limitation on press freedom in what he regards as the special circumstances in Red China.

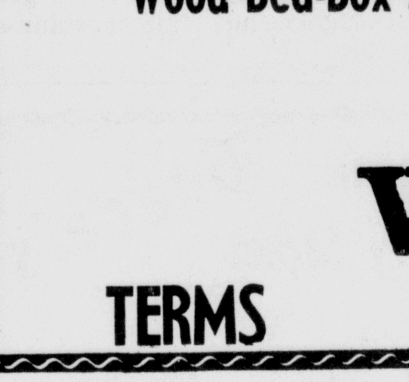

At the Dulles conference will be his greatest friend among publishers, Henry Luce of Time magazine. Two others will represent radio and TV, a medium over which all administrations exercise concentrated economic power through the Federal Communications Commission, which licenses and polices the stations. The remaining two will represent editors and publishers.

As a practical matter not many "working stiffs," independent of their selection by a powerful and well-heeled organization, can or would wish to enter Red China. It will be expensive, time-consuming and possibly risky.

Yet what Dulles seems to regard as the adventurers of the trade have a contribution to make. Speaking bluntly, they can operate without hedging while men assigned to permanent offices must work with reserve and discretion, laying their pipelines for the long pull and using them with care.

Even the most casual reader of travel books and memoirs must be impressed with the value to the British, over the centuries, of its adventurers into strange lands. Those people were men and women who were daring, and often extremely eccentric. They loved their country and cared not a damn for any politician.

If the Secretary of State were not so determined to keep every smidge of U. S. foreign policy in his own two hands, he could have used the perfect "out." It was an invitation extended to a large group of correspondents by the Red China government. This group was willing to take responsibility for its own decisions.

Vote Battle May Be Key To Civil Rights

By Thomas L. Stokes

WASHINGTON. -- Politicians always have an eye to the practical. They look no further than the next election and toward that, in most cases, with dark forebodings. That is responsible for the axiom that all politicians "run scared."

Politicians include Senators. Those gentlemen of the toga consider themselves most fortunate among politicians, for theirs is a nice niche with plenty of prestige and perquisites.

They are, indeed, the elite and luxury class among politicians. They are so regarded by their brother politicians in lower echelons, such as Governors and members of the House of Representatives who dream constantly of getting into that select company.

Which is all by way of pointing out that, so far as Southern Senators are concerned, a vital issue in the fight now going on over the Eisenhower Administration's civil rights bill is its protection of the Negro right to vote. For the end result of that will be to encourage more Negroes to vote.

And if that happens on a big scale, it could mean trouble for sitting Southern Senators who have fought civil rights bills for years and have, in some cases, said things which Negroes never forget.

In short, wholesale voting by Negroes threatens the nice life they enjoy and the power they can exercise in key places of power, far out of proportion to their numbers and to the number of people they represent. This is because of the guaranteed long tenure in the still virtually "one-party" South. This, in turn, moves them up through the seniority system to committee chairmanships and keeps them there a long time.

You can see the reason for Southern Senatorial concern over any considerable extension of voting among Negroes in figures prepared by the Southern Regional Council.

The council estimates that of 422,670 Negro eligibles in Virginia, only 84,931 now vote. Figures for other Southern states are:

North Carolina, 549,740 eligible, 102,000 voters; South Carolina, 390,000 eligible, 98,890 voters; Georgia, 633,690 eligible, 163,380 voters; Florida, 366,797 eligible, 148,703 voters; Alabama, 516,245 eligible, 53,336 voters; Tennessee, 371,480 eligible, 148,592 voters; Mississippi, 497,350 eligible, 18,000 voters; Arkansas, 232,191 eligible, 67,851 voters; Louisiana, 510,090 eligible, 161,410 voters, and Texas, 550,992 eligible, 209,297 voters.

In the current Senate debate, Southern Senators are caught between the necessity of taking a position that will satisfy their white constituents' antagonism to integration and at the same time not offend their Negro constituents and would-be voters. They are saying nothing publicly, of course, about extension of the franchise and their fears about it.

They have sought to divert attention and to confuse the issue by talking of other matters, always in the solemn cadence with which all Senators discuss what they gravely call "Constitutional issues." Senators consider themselves the special protectors of the Constitution.

Southern Senators usually are most skillful in political maneuver. But they were outmaneuvered in the early stages of the civil rights contest by an adroit Yankee technician out of Nebraska by way of New York, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. He chose his ground carefully.

Brownell concentrated on the right to vote issue, simple and basic. That had three virtues. In the first place, it is hard for anyone to challenge the right to vote. In the second place, extension of voting to more Negroes in the South should make more Republican votes. And, third, the Republican party's concern for this fundamental civil right, along with others, would help it with Negroes everywhere.

When the Southerners awakened to the Attorney General's maneuver, they sent in one of their cleverest, a former state judge, Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina. He sought to concentrate the issue on trial by jury, a slogan that always arouses our people.

In a three-day running debate with Brownell during committee hearings, Ervin assailed the provision in the Administration's bill for trial before a judge instead of by a jury in cases where injunctions to protect civil rights were violated.

After that, the Southern situation became more desperate through the successful maneuver by the Republican-Northern Democratic coalition in bypassing the Judiciary Committee, where the civil rights bill had been bottled up, and placing the House bill on the Senate calendar.

In this emergency, the leader of the Southern bloc, Senator Richard B. Russell of Georgia, went all out on a new line. He said the real aim of the bill was to "bring the whole might of the Federal government, including the armed forces, if necessary, to force a commingling of white and Negro children in the state-supported schools of the South."

That was real blood and thunder. And it was effective in at least one quarter, the White House. The President took notice, with the result that Russell went to the White House and aired his views.

Neither naturally convinced the other. The Senator found the President's mind not closed to possible amendment but determined to get a civil rights bill this session - if possible.

Television and Radio

By John Crosby

MAN OF MANY VOICES

Stan Freberg, the man of many voices who can reduce me to helpless laughter with his better satiric flights, now has his own radio show on CBS (7:30 p.m. EDT, Sunday). The opening show last Sunday was, I should say, a yes-and-no affair which had moments of great charm and bright wit but contained some empty spots, too.

Freberg is not only a satirist but a man with a great gift for fantasy, which is sometimes delightful and sometimes gets him into trouble. The show's opening, for instance, found the live Stan Freberg arguing with the various personalities created by the recorded Stan Freberg. "It's frightening! It's frightening!" exclaimed Freberg. It was also a wonderful demonstration of the man's versatility and imaginative range.

This was followed by a bit in which Freberg played the part of a French sheepherder who had taught his sheep to play a tune on the bells around their necks. This was charming. It was a mixture of both fantasy and humor in pure sound -- something that wouldn't come off on a television screen at all -- and an excellent example of what Freberg does best. He is essentially a sound man and he knows how to call into play the imagination of his listeners. He has done some of his things on television and always, to me, there's a let-down. I'd rather do my own imagining.

The bulk of the show was devoted to something called a Freberg fable, entitled "Incident at Los Varoses," and this was drawn out far too thinly. It detailed a ferocious rivalry between two gambling establishments known as El Sodom and Rancho Gomorrah, Los Varoses being a thinly disguised Las Vegas.

The trouble with trying to satirize that fabled sin-spot is that the excesses of Las Vegas in the entertainment field are so bad that it is almost impossible to top them. As a result, the thing got pretty strained and seemed interminable.

Just the same, it was an interesting and unusual half-hour and well worth listening to. Next Sunday Freberg promises an interview with the Abominable Snowman and the inside story on the midnight ride of Paul Revere, both topics that you are not likely to hear just anywhere. You might just blow the dust off that radio in the corner next week and sample purely aural humor for a change.

Just ahead of Freberg, CBS radio has started a new panel show called "Sez Who," presided over -- with great difficulty -- by Henry Morgan. The panelists are Gypsy Rose Lee, John Henry Faulk and Joey Adams and the idea of the game is to guess the identity of voices on records, most of them old ones. The first one, for example, was that of Enrico Caruso singing, "Johnny Get Your Gun" at a World War I bond rally.

However, the game was rapidly buried under a barrage of wisecracks and acrimony that sounded a little too edged to be quite comfortable. "What started as a simple game has developed into one of the greatest indoor fights," lamented Mr. Morgan at one point. "I hope we can all leave this studio together."

From the point of view of the show, perhaps it is just as well that distemper occurred. "Sez Who" is a pretty witless and simple-minded parlor game, even as radio parlor games go, and was not especially helped by a sort of studied ignorance on the part of the panelists of almost every field with which the mystery voices were connected. "It takes two to play baseball?" asked Miss Lee innocently, a remark I shall always cherish.

She was talking about a comedy routine between Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig which was pretty awful, even for a couple of baseball players. It was this sort of thing that the ancients claim killed vaudeville and future generations may well say it was this kind of program that killed radio.

A DECISION to engage the firm of Arthur D. Little Co. of Boston to make an economic base study and industrial survey of Warren County was made when the Warren County Development association met in the YMCA Monday night. The project will cost between eight and ten thousand dollars.

The group established the week of August 19 for a campaign to raise $5,000, half of the amount needed. The other half of the finances will be provided by the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Assistance Act, which provides matching state funds for industrial promotion and planning work. Warren County is eligible for about $4,300 and the local association has been certified as the agency to receive the funds.

The project is expected to take six months to complete.

At Monday's session representatives adopted by-laws and re-elected an interim executive committee to serve until the first annual election of directors in January.

The purpose of the organization is to enlist citizen participation in planning and promoting the orderly growth and economic, industrial, recreational, social and cultural development of Warren County.

A meeting will be held Wednesday, August 14, to complete plans for the financial campaign.

NEW LOOK . . . The addition of a parking lot to the side of the Observer office on Hickory st. has provided a new view of the plant which does not seem large from the front. However, since the removal of the house which recently sat here the depth of the building has surprised many.

The Observer plant is sufficiently large to publish a daily paper and to continue job printing. Two more rooms are being added on the north side of the plant.

Incidentally, this picture reveals how illegal parking by those other than employes can block the lot. This is for employes only and the Observer hopes that it will not be necessary to legally protect its privacy.

MORE FACILITIES. The announcement made last week revealing that the Emblem Oil Co. is planning to construct an ultra modern filling station with more parking spaces for area shoppers on the former Carver Hotel site, brings attention to some other changes being made in the community which are pointed out by photos on the page.

THE HUNGRY will look from the porch of the Penn Laurel Motel and see this opposite wing which houses the kitchen and dining room. It is possible that a cocktail lounge will be located in the basement of the dining wing.

SECOND FLOOR. Fifteen rooms line this corridor of the Penn Laurel Motel. It goes down the center of the west wing with rooms on both sides.

SHOLEM ASCH DIES

We didn't see much publicity on the death of Sholem Asch when it occurred last Wednesday. In fact we saw nothing about it except in two paragraphs on an inside page of the Christian Science Monitor.

Asch, a native of Poland who became a naturalized American in 1920, was a Zionist and settled in Israel in 1956. Most of his books were based on the Bible and were translated into many languages. Such books as "The Nazarene", "Three Cities", "Song of the Valley", "Ruth", "The Mother", "The Apostles", "Mary", and "Moses" sold millions of copies.

If you missed this reading we suggest you try some of it. You may find a new friend on the bookshelf.

CLASSIC CARS

We would have enjoyed being in Greenfield Village last Saturday when the Midwest Grand Classic of the Classic Car Club of America was held. Proof that they made some mighty fine cars a few years ago, cars that had power, speed, and quality, and cars that lasted more than three or four years, were to be seen there.

They had eight, twelve, and even sixteen cylinders. The entry list included 125 makes, all noted for their high engineering standards, superior workmanship, and fine design. Their value was set at about $500,000.

The roll call read: Auburn, Bentley, Cord, Cunningham, Cadillac, Lincoln, Duesenberg, Franklin, Horch, Kissel, Locomobile, Marmon, Mercedes, Packard, Peerless, Pierce Arrow, Rolls Royce, Ruxton, Squire, Stutz, and Wills Saint Claire.

Of special interest would have been eight classic cars from the Ford Museum. These included a 1927 Mercedes Sport Phaeton; a 1925 Rolls Royce once owned by financier J. P. Morgan; 1939 Lincoln V-12 phaeton used by King George VI and Queen Elizabeth; 1937 Cord Sportsman with supercharger.

These were classic cars, well made, and something for the common man to stare at. They included some workmanship which may not be found in production line cars today.

However, one aspect of these annual affairs is that no matter how fancy these models of the past were, today's motorist has most of the facilities and advantages included in his regular model of 1957. In fact, he will find many advances which the fanciest cars of the past did not include.

It works both ways. These cars of yesterday reveal the forward look of many engineers and cause the motorist to wonder why he has been denied such facilities for so many years. They also reveal that the fancy prices of yesterday are not much higher than standard prices of today if you include all the gadgets. Prices and wages have climbed.

But the fun of motoring need not be limited to classics of the past. Despite their romantic background, we have cars today which can run them into the ground. Today the average motorist can buy a car which gives him finger-tip and toe-tip control of everything from brakes to windows.

The clutch of yesterday is nearly obsolete. Why any car is built with anything but automatic drive can be answered only by the manufacturers and they won't admit that it is another way of adding a few dollars to the price.

A touch of the toe and we wash the windshield. From the driver's seat we can control any window. Our radio tunes itself into the best stations. Our engines are so powerful they can stand on their rear fender and climb skyward with no thought of second gear.

But -- the leg room is cramped in the back seat, the fenders many times are too big for good vision, parking becomes scarce, but the cars become longer. Rust is a major enemy despite advancement in steel processing. Tires can be driven a hundred miles after blowing out, and they have no tubes, but they cost a month's wages. (The selling point--is your life worth a month's salary?)

Motoring today, right off the production line, can be glamorous, exciting, convenient, sporting. We get a real bang out of the Stutz, the Squire, and the Cord of yesterday, but today's model will give you much more if you let it. And there is nothing to prevent you from tinkering with it for greater efficiency and pleasure.

There is one slant to the car of today which takes something away from motoring. One pleasure is to explore, which calls for back-road traveling on some lanes that are the opposite extreme from supers. The low road clearance of too many models makes this a bit risky and costly. And the sport cars of today are apt to flip on rough, rutted roads in the back country.

But motoring has been made easy, if expensive. And there are some mites on the road that even make it economical. Convertibles are common these days as the fresh air boys who like to see where they are going and the sky above take over a share of the roads.

We would have enjoyed looking over the classic models. But we'll settle for the 1957 wheel we have in our hands.

the trick is getting the bunny INTO the hat!

Anybody can pull a rabbit out of a hat -- if the bunny's there. Bunny . . . money . . . it's the same story. You can't pull it out if it hasn't first been put in. Someday you're going to need a sizeable sum of cash. So the trick is to start NOW putting it in the Bank against the day when you'll want to take it out. That isn't magic -- just good judgement. We'd love to start that Savings Account for you NOW!

MR. AND MRS. JULIUS PAVKOV

A single ring wedding performance in the First Church of the Nazarene July 29th united in marriage Mary Doris King, daughter of Gerald L. King, 201 Russell st., Warren, and Julius Pavkov, son of Mrs. Mary Pavkov and the late Julius Pavkov, Sr., of Akron, O.

A graduate of Warren high school, the bride is employed by the Pennsylvania Electric Co. The groom graduated from Edinboro high school, Edinboro, and is presently attending Ft. Wayne Bible College, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

TWO HOURS elapsed between the taking of these two pictures at Valley Forge on Tuesday afternoon. The first photo shows the Warren gateway yet to be erected with very few tents in the background. Only two hours later the gateway has been erected along with many other tents as some of the 50,000 scouts arrived to camp in 25,000 tents at the historical park.

The site is that of Pennsylvania Scouts and when completed made up only one thirty-fourth of the entire jamboree. This contingent consisted of 1200 boys and 250 leaders.

FINALLY. McPherson st., one of the most costly streets to maintain in Warren, soon will be completely paved. It is a part of the 1957 program which is costing Warren over $70,000. Left to be done are Plum st. and the airport.

TROUBLE ON THE MAYFLOWER

That was in 1620 when the Pilgrims made their historic voyage to America and what to do for diapers was a real problem. Old documents record the birth of two babies, Oceanus Hopkins and Peregrin White, but nobody mentions how they were cared for and we can only assume their mothers made diapers from old petticoats or sheets. Cloth was harsh and so coarsely woven in the early days, even pounding it pliable in buttermilk, as was the custom, wouldn't make it suitable to use on a tiny baby.

The rag diaper of 1620 and today's gay pastel Curity diapers, are as different as caterpillars and butterflies; the latest style put out by this well known manufacturer is a quaint Mayflower print, as pretty as a bouquet of Spring posies.

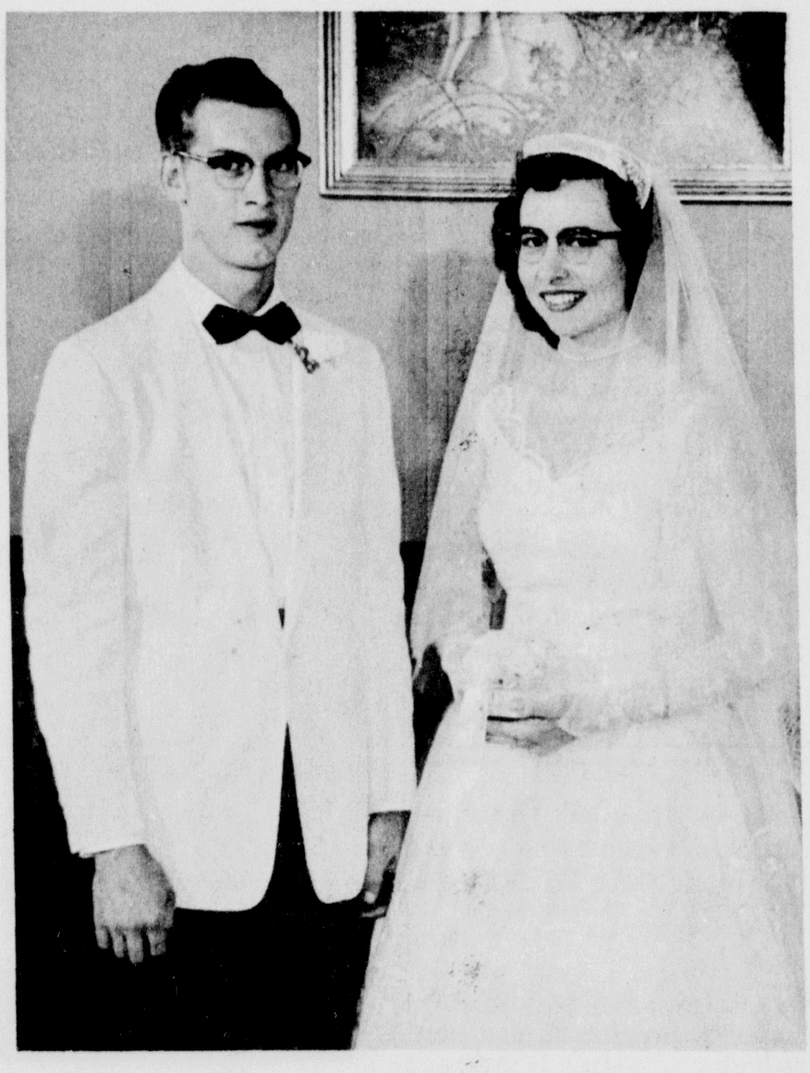

SUPPOSED VICTIMS of an attack were placed in buildings adjacent to the Carver lot to help Civil Defense rescue personnel drill Thursday evening.

THESE CD RESCUE workers were responsible for providing electricity with an auxiliary motor when crews went into operation on the Carver lot.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN from all over Warren County participated in the special CD drill Thursday. This crew, about the first to the Hickory st.-Pennsylvania ave. scene, was from Pleasant twp. Borough firefighters and employes also took part in the exercises.

Melva Luanna Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Johnson, R.D. 1, Bear Lake, became the bride of John R. Luther, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Luther, Sr., Youngsville, in a ceremony performed June 29th in the Lottsville Methodist Church.

MARCONI BRIDGE

The weekly tournament of Marconi Bridge Club members was held last Monday evening with six and one-half tables in play. A. Kornreich, 74-1/2; H. D. Kopf, Jr., and Anthony J. Scalise, 72-1/2.

Average for East-West was 60 and maximum 120; Mrs. J. A. Bevevino and Henry Hunzinger, 72-1/2; Mrs. M. A. Kornreich and Bery Kornreich, 65-1/2; Mrs. George Sarvis and Dr. R. H. Israel, 64-1/2; Dr. P. King and John Israel, 61.

Kornreich, James R. Valone, D. A. Scalise and D. L. Vetera, all of whom have hopes of accumulating enough red points to become Life Masters.

The troop from the Chief Cornplanter Council arrived Tuesday afternoon, two days before the official opening of the Jamboree on Friday morning.

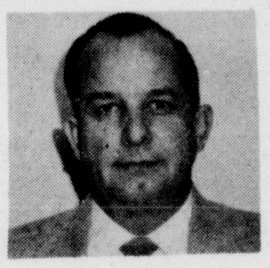

Friday night, along with 50,000 other scouts from the free countries of the world, they heard Vice President Nixon speak and saw a gigantic fireworks display.

This week the Scouts took a historical tour of Philadelphia, saw TV programs televised from the huge outdoor arena where pageants are put on by the scouts every other night and took part in scouting activities.

The Warren County troop will return home by chartered bus tomorrow.

DRASTIC CHANGES in the Mutual Broadcasting System can be expected this week, according to trade talk. Alternatives to a losing year may result in its sale, or a reduction in schedules, or perhaps even its finish as a network.

It lost almost a half million last year, despite sales of six million. Its affiliated stations have dropped from a peak of nearly 600 to about 500, and it has about fifty staff members to do the job that once required about 350.

The answer, of course is television. Mutual did not follow other networks into the visual field.

GOOD PRACTICE

Occupants of the civil defense rescue boat found themselves stuck in the muck in a duck, last Thursday. The amphibious vehicle really isn't intended for river use, but it offers the operators good practice. They got it on the banks of the Allegheny, near the airport. The winch went to work and out they rolled.

New Super Premium Gasoline AVAILABLE FRIDAY

United Refining Company announced today that an entirely new super premium gasoline, KEYSTONE POWERFLIGHT 100 will be available to the motorists of this area at all Keystone service stations starting this Friday, July 19th.

The new motor fuel, a product of the most modern petroleum refining equipment yet devised by petroleum technologists, will be the finest super premium gasoline available in this section of the country. The new motor fuel will be sold at no increase over the conventional price of premium gasolines.

New super premium KEYSTONE POWERFLIGHT 100 will be sold through the distinctively marked pumps pictured in the photograph above and motorists should have little difficulty in recognizing the new gasoline.

Simultaneous with the announcement about new KEYSTONE POWERFLIGHT 100, the company indicated that KEYSTONE POWERFUEL has also been given an added octane boost making the popular-priced brand the highest octane "regular" gasoline available.

TE LA DI O

ALL-STAR GOLF

This is the title given to a new NBC-TV series scheduled to tee off next October. The twenty-six telecasts will match players such as Cary Middlecoff, Sam Snead, Julius Boros, Gene Sarazen, Lloyd Mangrum and others, who will have only to play good golf to make a lot of money. The winner of each two-man 18-hole match each week will receive $2,000, the loser $1,000. Players will ring up $10,000 for a hole-in-one and $500 for every eagle. The winners will remain on the program until defeated by a challenger, a different one each week. The games will be filmed before a gallery at clubs in the West and Southwest.

NEW LOOK

You soon will be reading and hearing about the new look in television. The big change in sets next year may not improve your picture but it will provide more room for those who watch. The sets will be thinner and much will be said about slim lines, lean looks, and all the phrases ad men can dream up. RCA and General Electric already have been named among those who will so advertise. Others will follow.

What? 300 Million Years To Cook Our Dinner!

That's right. The natural gas that now cooks your meals so quickly and does so many other chores so well was born 300 million years ago—or more.

When the earth was still quite young, the vast seas that covered it began to recede. As they did, trillions of tiny organisms and ocean plants were covered by sediment. The sediment became rock. Intense heat and pressure then distilled the embedded plants and organisms into natural gas.

There the gas lay, trapped beneath the ground for centuries, until man discovered it and solved the problems of bringing this clean, dependable, economical fuel right to your home. Nature's gift of 300 million years ago has become the "wonder fuel" of the Twentieth Century.

Today, natural gas is the modern, efficient fuel. And it serves you best when you use it with modern, automatic gas appliances.

NO WATER ACTIVITY

The lack of water sport in the Warren county area is strongly driven home by the number of licenses sold for outboard and inboard motors in this state last year. Though 43,130 licenses were sold, an increase of 6,000 over 1955, the list of counties does not even include Warren.

Even little Forest is listed with 217 licenses. Venango county had 800, and Elk, where no major river flows, had 112.

If the Tionesta dam could mean that much to Forest county, imagine what the Kinzua structure would mean to Warren, both as a result of the lake that would materialize, and the clean, even flow that would be found downstream.

1958 FISHING

It may be a little early for 1958 fishing laws, but the commission already has met and has named the size, season, and creel limits for inland waters. You might as well see them now, and here they go:

TROUT (brook, brown and rainbow) - 5:00 A.M., April 15 to midnight, September 1; 6-inch minimum size; daily limit - 8, combined species.

LAKE TROUT - 5:00 A.M., April 15 to midnight, October 31; no minimum size; daily limit - 8.

BASS (largemouth and smallmouth) - January 1 to midnight, March 14 and June 15 to midnight, March 14, 1959; no minimum size; daily limit - 6, combined species.

MUSKELLUNGE - Open year around; minimum size - 30 inches; daily limit - 2.

FROGS AND TADPOLES - July 2 to midnight, October 31; no minimum size; daily limit - 25. Season limit on frogs - 25. It is unlawful to take frogs by the use of an artificial light.

NO DOE LICENSE

Those who hunt with the bow and arrow can shoot either sex and do not need a special doe license. However, they do need an archery license in addition to their hunting license. The bill has been signed by the Governor.

MIGRATORY RESERVATIONS

Another law signed will permit the federal government to acquire land anywhere in Pennsylvania, except Delaware county, for the establishment of migratory bird reservations. However, the executive director of the game commission and the governor must approve each purchase.

MORE FEE ALLOWED

Another law will allow county treasurers to charge more than ten cents for issuing fish, hunting, and dog licenses.

VETOED

Governor Leader vetoed several game laws. One would have made it unlawful to shoot an arrow from any vehicle or conveyance. Another would have turned over one-fourth the proceeds from the sale of timber products from state-owned lands to the county. And he thumbed down a law that would have transferred the control of the propagation of fur-bearing animals from the Game Commission to the Department of Agriculture.
